In less than a generation, Canadians have begun to view naturopathic medicine with new eyes, and the Canadian College of Naturopathic Medicine (CCNM) has had a pivotal role in making that happen. Now, in 2008, we're taking it to the next level. We're determined to be a bold new force in Canadian health care.

The evolution that's been taking place in the field has led us to reconsider the College's role. It's brought us to reaffi

new coordinator

CCNM's new coordinator of continuing education and alumni relations has a good idea about the kind of professional development courses that will benefit NDs. That's because she is a naturopathic doctor herself.

Zeynep Uraz, ND, accepted the coordinator position after completing a one-year residency at the Robert Schad Naturopathic Clinic (RSNC), where she cared for patients and was a teaching assistant.

While she continues to be involved with clinical activities, Zeynep's new role will allow her to use her knowledge of naturopathic medicine to ensure that CCNM's continuing education courses are of high quality and meet the needs of the profession.

"I want to have a good, solid continuing education program that offers something of high relevance and high applicability for all practicing NDs, and that's also accessible for

Each year CCNM will organize a series of practice management sessions exposing students to the expertise and experiences of a combination of business professionals and NDs with successful practices. Lecturers will cover topics such as financing, marketing, communications, and

The Winter 2008 Vital Link journal will focus on autoimmune diseases and hit members' mailboxes at the end of February. Major changes to the Vital Link's content, format and appearance implemented during the last couple of years have been well received by the membership. We encourage you to continue providing your feedback on how the CAND can improve its internal and external initiatives. We wish everyone a prosperous first quarter!
